POLITICAL NOTES

—Southern political amenities: A Mississippi paper tells a local politician that "mankind regards him as a full tailed and unadulterated ass."

—Enough falsehoods have been told by the Democratic press during the present State campaign, to out-number all the mosquitoes in New Jersey.

—Says a Democratic paper: "Emigration southward will not set in very generally until they get rid of a few of their plagues down there." True. And their worst plague is Bourbonism.

—During the last ten months of Treasurer Mackey's term of office, there has been a reduction in the public debt of $1,431,878. Does this look like extravagance and fraud—or honesty and retrenchment?

—How unspeakably earthy is Bourbonism! The utterance of its organ in this city are as mouldy as the grave. Almost every sentence smacks of mildew; there is not a single foretaste of sunshine in them. Bourbonism is like a mole—evermore burrowing in the rayless dark.—Pittsburg Commercial.

—The order of the Grange is steadily making its way to the South. The officers are assured of their ability to keep it out of politics. The economic advantages of the order are being constantly extended, among the latest being a movement looking to the inauguration of a self, or mutual system of insurance, covering crops, buildings and lives.

—A word to intelligent and thoughtful Democrats. Remember, that on no living national question has the Democracy any ground to stand upon; and that the only practicable way in which reasonable and progressive men can assist the solution of the great issues of the time through political action, is by leaving the demoralized Democratic organization to its fate, and strengthening the hands of the Republican party; making it, with its fresh life and invincible power, the great agency of reform.

—One of Reading's rich men, who was talked of this summer as a good man for the Democrats to nominate for a certain State office not disconnected from the finances of commonwealth, lost a pocket-book the other day, which contained over $200 in money and a number of valuable papers. A poor but honest young man fonnd it, and finding from its contents to whom it belonged, returned it to the owner, expecting, as a matter of course, to be rewarded for his good faith. Never a word about reward said the man of money; but he did ask said the young man to drink a glass of beer with him. Exit h. y. m. in disgust.

—Democratic organs, in these States in which elections occur this month, run over with extravagant references to the past character and importance of that party. Granting—which we do not grant—that the half they say concerning its earlier greatness be true, we utterly fail to see wherein it helps the case of modern Democracy; since, although one should have sprung in direct line from Hercules, yet if he show a low-born meanness, the long succession of ancestors whom he disgraces are so many witnesses against him; and his grand display of tarnished glory does but serve to make his ignomy all the more evident.

—It ought not to be forgotten that it is wholly owing to the Republican administration and a Republican financial system that, notwithstanding the late financial revolution, no man has a worthless bill in his pocket. There could hardly be a stronger evidence of the soundness of the system, which is founded upon the immutable rock of our existance as a nation. Heretofore, under Democrrtic regime, whenever a bank suspended, every man hastily scanned his pocket-book to ascertain if the bankruptcy had affected him. Now, every man has maintained his composure, so far as his currency is concerned, and manifested the utmost indifference as to what banks have been broken or remained solvent. The people understand that, let what may happen, their currency, whether greenbacks or National bank notes, is absolutely secure, and its value liable neither to annihilation or depreciation. This confidence-inspiring policy has been the work of the Republican party.

PRESIDENT GRANT.

It is amusing to those who have a personal knowledge of the simplicity of character which distinguishes President Grant, to read the silly twaddle indulged in by some of the Opposition papers about his tendency towards imperialism.

For a noted man, who has made his mark upon the pages of history; who has conferred a benefit upon his country that will be remembered by the latest generation, he stands without an equal for plainness of manner and unaffected simplicity of character. He is one of those rare exceptions among public men—of being great without appearing to know it. Seen upon the streets, he would pass for a quiet citizen. He walks with the crowd as if he was one of them, sometimes accompanied with a friend, but oftener without. His movements are slow, as if he believed in taking things easy, when there was no necessity of being in a hurry. He would be called a slow walker; in fact, given a certain distance to walk and nine out of ten would beat him, but none would appear less fatigued at the end of the journey. His walking is in keeping with his general character. What he lacks in nervous activity he makes up in reliability, firmness and endurance. He is more substancial than brilliant. This is noted in his conversation. Plain, matter-of-fact expressions fall from his lips. What he has to say is said in a few words. A slow talker, he impresses all who hear him with the fact that he understands his subject thoroughly, and says less than he thinks. You leave his presence with a pleasant impression of the man. You vote him a gentleman in every sense of the term, and if you forget what he said, you will not soon forget the unassuming manner in which he said it. The man has left a greater impression than the office, and the modesty of the one has increased your respect for the other.

By what process this plain American gentleman could be converted into an imperialist, even if the people clamored for the conversation, is beyond our comprehension. If we believed the Opposition leaders were in earnest in their ridiculous talk, we would ask them to describe the means to be employed to bring about this wonderful transformation of personal character. But we presume the charge is kept standing because it is the only one left for Democracy to practice upon. Chages relating to what has been can be easily proved or disproved. When you come to deal with the future we can only judge it by the past. The Democracy are welcome to coin charges out of their unknown future, but when they are driven to that extremity they must not expect sensible people to accept Democratic prophesy as equal to verified truth. When the sun and the moon exchange places, or, what is equally improbable, the Democratic party becomes noted for its honesty, then we may look out for kings in this coutry—not before. If we could be assured of living until this change takes place, Mathuselah's years would be as infancy compared to our ripe old age.

——We have received the initial number of the Enterprise, a new paper published at Lock Haven. It is neatly printed and contains considerable reading matter. The advertising is rather "fatty" for success and if Bowman gets a panacea for infligestion, he may give them a lively brush for the lead, but from the list of its backers, found in the attorneys' cards, it seems to have the support of the heavy healthy-stomach brigade. Two republican papers in a minority county reminds us of home sweet home, and we suppose in both cases the longest pole will knock the persimmons.

NOTICE.—An elegant afghan, the property of Mrs. Captain Lytle, which was on exhibition at the Fair last week has been taken by mistake or otherwise. It was numbered 711 on the premium list, was striped orange, black, white and green, with two rows of fringe. The party having it in possession will please return it immediately to the owner at the Bush House.

THE ELECTION.

The State all Right!

GORDON & MACKEY ELECTED!

A Light Vote Out

GRAMLY PROBABLY ELECTED.

We have held our paper back one day in order to give our readers this week some idea of how the election has gone. The State Ticket is elected by an increased Republican majority, although the vote is very light. Mackey has carried Philadelphia by at least 20,000 and Gordon by 15,000, a member of the Senate and several of the House of Representatives are gained in Philadelphia and an Assemblyman in Fayette county. Incomplete as the returns are at the present writing, they leave no doubt of the complete triumph of the entire Republican State Ticket. As respects Judge Gordon, it was evident from the start that he was very far superior to his opponent in the requirments which constitute an upright and impartial Judge and notwithstanding the bitter partisan detraction of which during the past few weeks he has been made the subject, he has been elected by a majority of which he may well feel proud. He has been supported by the plain practicle intelligence and conscience of the sturdy ploding straigth forward people from whom he sprung. As regards Mackey, the simple fact that he runs far ahead of his ticket should be sufficient to teach his calumniators that slander and falshood are the very poorest of all possible malignant investments. It is to boped that they may profit by the lesson.

The results in our county is not all we could have wished. Our candidate for Assembly is badly beaten, not making near his party vote, Orvis, (Dem.) being elected by about 600 to 800 majority. Bayard for Treasurer run ahead of his ticket, receiving in Bellefonte Borough 191 majority while Gramly for Commissioner leads them all—the indications at the present time being that he is elected by about 50 to 75 majority; Above we give the vote as far as heard from. Next week we will give the complete returns.

The returns from the Senatorial district are so meagre that we are unable to say with any certainty what the result will be, but it is very close. If Huntingdon does her whole duty Irwin will be elected as the indications are at the present time that he has carried Juniata. Mifflin gives Warcam from 300 to 400 majority and Centre 400 which gives Irwin about 800 to be overcome in Huntingdon and Juniata. Although we regard the election of Irwin as doubtful yet the case is not hopeless and we hope for the best.

ON THE WING—NO. 8.

"Zion is a hard road to travel." What meaning may have been expressed by the above sentence originally, we leave to our readers to determine. But if they ride from Bellefonte or Hublersburg to Zion, they will think it has special reference to this road.

One feels glad there is abundance of iron in the valley to renew the ware and tare of carriages. Zion is a comfortable little village about five miles from Bellefonte, on the road to Lock Haven. And if the number of her churches be an indication of her piety, the name is quite appropriate. There are three churches in this little town, German Reform, Evanglical Methodist and Presbyterian. The town is encircled by magnificent farms, of a rich limestone soil. Dr. Fisher resides here and has a large and successful practice. There is a good school here under the care of Mr. Rupert, who is an industrious, efficient and succesful teacher. The ridge which divides and disfigures Nittany Valley flattens down, and makes the valley more attractive at this point.

Among the beautiful and productive farms of this neighborhood, is that of Mr. Jacob Struble, Esq. This farm lies between the village and Nittany mountain. But before we say much about the farm, we will say something about the family. For though we may be native Americans, our ancestors were from the "other side the flood." The Grandfather of Jacob Struble came from Germany some years before the Revolution. He settled in Morris county, New Jersey. He chose his home near the Head-quarters of General Washington, in the time of the Revolution, and in this Netherlands of the war for freedom. While the eastern portion of the state of New Jersey was over run by the British army, the mountains of Morris and Sussex counties were free from their ravages. Under the shadows of Schooleys mountains his family was secure from the frequent visits of foreign soldiers. But the patriotism of the old battle state was a living fire through these mountains. It was a warm place for loyalist to come. There, amid these beautiful mountains, this wanderer from "Fatherland" made a home. He had a family of ten sons who lent their strong German muscles to the Father of his country, and helped fight for liberty. These ten sons helped make the clear mountain air of New Jersey ring with their merry shouts when the fight was won. One of the sons moved into Union county, Penn., and raised a family, one of which was Jacob Struble who came from Union county to the farm where he now lives in 1839, to make a home for himself. How well he has succeeded, all know who have enjoyed the hospitality of the venerable man now eighty years old. The farm is now under the care of his two sons, and the old gentleman looks on, and enjoys the quiet evening of a long life. He is one of the old men of Centry county, a link between the present and the past generation. When he came into the valley, he found a forest, and purchased his land for twenty dollars an acre. The farm consists of about three hundred acrer. It is said there is not a farm in the valley with so abundant and choice fruit as this. It is a grain farm, and produces large returns for labors expended. This year has been a year of abundant crops. The father and two sons live near each other and enjoy life in its even flow. The old gentleman has been for years a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. He is a safe counselor, a good neighbor. Here we see the working of our institutions. All the nationalities of Europe come into the arms of our Republican government, the old languages, the old habits, old associations, are forgotten, and we have a new race called Americans. All the bloods of Europe are mingled, crossed, mixed up, and we have a new set of men. If it took the mingling of three or four generations to make a Nepoleon or a Washington, what kind of a race are we to have in the country, where the blood of twenty different nations are crossing, and fusing, being welded into a new race. Old boundary lines, old names, are to be wiped out, old languages are to be forgotten, old prejudices worn out, become obsolete, in the production of the grand new race, under the proud name of Americans. Our government is to absorb a continent, extending from ocean to ocean, from the North pole, to the Equator. This is the grand theatre upon which is to exist the greatest race of the ages. A new era in the development of the human mind has been ushered into being. Freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, are gradually moulding a new mental growth. The old world is to be led by the new. System will struggle with system. Regard for the past will be forgotten in the mighty contest just ahead of us. Mr. Struble is a descendant of Germans, but he is wholly Americanized. In the country which his fathers helped to free, he has helped to govern. He became a member of the Legislature of Pennsylvania in 1856, and no one has ever discovered that it injured his moral character in going to Harrisburg. And this cannot be said of all that go now-a-days. A man, in Huntingdon county two years ago, was urged to stand a nomination for Legislative honors. To all entreaties, he returned this answer: "Gentlemen, what misdemenors have I committed, that you visit me with this infliction?" He did not go. But our friend Struble came away from Harrisburg as pure as he went, and so a guilty conscience has not shortened his days, for he is a hearty old man at eighty. He went to the Legislature when it was a far more honorable achievement, before Legislators took advantage of their position to enrich themselves. It was an honor in those days which men coveted. In twenty-five years corruption has grown with rapid strides, in State and National Legislatures until and thinking men are alamed ask what the end will be? Those, therefore that go into these official positions and return unstained, will be remembered with gratitude by their fellowmen. Mr. Struble was borne into office by the force of one of those political storms that sometimes sweep across the pathway of politicians, which they remember as a sort of political night-mare. It came like a blazing meteor, crashing through the heavens, lighting the darkness with such a glare that political astronomers could see is without glasses. It laid many an officer seeker away in the sleep that knew no waking. It went, sweeping its resistless current through the Middle and Eastern States, sending its invisible shaft to right and left. It broke through the lines of one of the most compact organizations the country ever saw, and these lines have never been reformed since. It came, we knew not whence, and went we know where. The name is found in "Webster Unabridged" but the organization soon passed away. "The fevered dream is o'er." But the lesson still remains, a lesson which the Jusuits and their wily master may stilt ponder with profit. The American people are patient people, but when their wrath is roused, it is the wrath of the Gods.

STATE NEWS.

—Philadelphia has another new paper—the Journal of the Exposition.

—The spring which supplies Allentown with water has a flowing capacity of 2,500,000 gallons per 24 hours.

—The First Presbyterian Church, of Williamsport, has extended a call to the Rev. George F. Cain, formerly of Erie.

—H. B. Smith, of Pottstown has a hymn book printed in 1776, and a Bible published in 1752, both in the German language.

—A Pottsville man ate a peck of raw tomatoes at one sitting, the other day. And it wasn't a good day for eating tomatoes with him, either.

—Three hundred and thirty-eight pounds of butter is what a Montgomery county cow has enabled her owner to realize from the product of the lacteous fount.

—A Luzerne county man fell asleep, soothed to slumber by much fire water. He slept forty five hours, and awoke to find that somebody had quietly cut one of his ears off.

—The "champion" pumpkin raiser so far this season belongs to Shaeffertown, Lebanon county. He raised 13 pumpkins on three stalks, averaging from 140 to 160 pounds. One of them measured 79½ inches.

—Mr. Tome, imprisoned in the York county jail, ten or twenty years for contempt of court, was set at liberty a few days since, on the recommendation of the Grand Jury, on the ground that he was sufficiently punished.

—Mrs. Richards, of Scranton, induced her husband to sell out, so they might go west. He did sell out, and she pocketed the proceeds of the sale, and then went off with another man, leaving a husband and five children.

—The Millerites have been having a grand time at Waterford for the past week. They have a large tent put up on the diamond and hold daily convocations there. The day for the ascension in white garments has not yet been fixed.

—The Juniata Sentinel and Juniata Republican have been consolidated under the title of the Juniata Sentinel and Republican. Mr. B. F. Schweir is editor and proprietor. The Independnet, of the same place, has suspended temporarily.

—William Glass, son of an ex-member of the Legislature from Snyder county, became intoxicated for the first and last time of his life on Saturday. On Sunday morning he became very sick and turned black all over his body, and on Monday he died.

—The Erie Dispatch says: Another batch of relics has been unearthed from the site of the old French fort, at the foot of Parade street. Among them are an old fashioned, rudely made iron or steal tomahawk, pieces of ancient styles of pottery ware, spikes, copper and lead.

—Wade, the condemned murderer, made a desperate attempt to escape from the Williamsport jail last week, but was prevented. He dug through his cell, broke the water pipe, and bade the officers defiance. He was caught and tied, but broke loose during the night, and was found next morning roaming about the halls.

—Bushong & Bro., bankers, of Reading, temporarily suspended on Wednesday, on account of the difficulty, amounting almost to impossibility, of converting their securities into currency. They hold deposits amounting to about $2,000,000, but will be able to pay dollar for dollar. The Eagle of Thursday says there is no excitement and no cause for alarm.

—The Mount pleasant Journal says: A good joke on a young city fellow who bought a farm last winter has just leaked out. He had a fine orchard of about two hundred apple trees, and a few weeks ago he tapped every one of them for cider. As it didn't run very well, he inquired of a neighbor what the matter was, and gave him a new hat not to tell any one else.

—About fifty farmers in Lancaster county took their tobacco to a couple of women living in the neighborhood, and had it made into cigars for home consumption. An internal revenue officer got wind of it, and had every one arrested for violation of the internal revenue law. The penalty for the offence with which they are charged is a fine of not less than $100, and imprisonment for not less than six months.

Poetry.

A CHILD'S PRAYER.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

Now I lay me down to sleep."
What a throb of solemn feeling
Thrills me, as I see them knelling,
Little child, with pure emotion,
At thy simple heart's devotion.
Once, a child like thee,
Knelt at my mother's knee,
Lisping out, with accent light,
The tiny prayer thou'st sayed to-night:
Many a year has passed away,—
She is old and I am grey,—
But the words she taught me then
May ne,er torget again.
'Mid the varied scenes of life,
In its bustle and its strife,
Has her spirit been before me,
Hovering, like an angel, o'er me;
In my hours of pain and care,
Ready every grief to share:
In each scene of joy and pleasure
She has been my chiefest treasure:
May I ne'er unworthy prove
Of that mother's earnest love!
I have often seen her weep
When she laid me down to sleep.

"I pray the Lord my soul to keep."
When the sun is bright in heaven,
Or when hid at darkling even:
When with hopes thy heart beats high;
When despair and gloom are nigh;
When success with joy has crowned thee;
When thy friends are gathered round thee;
In thy sickness, in thy health,
In thy penury or wealth;
When bowed down in gloom and sin,
Guilt without, remorse within;
In the busy mid day strife;
In the quet eve of night,
Look aloft; God careth for the,
He is ever watching o'er thee;
Thou art safe within His keeping,
Be thou waking, be thou sleeping,
He is watchful over all;
Guides the little sparrow's fall;
From His starry throne on high
Hears the ravens when they cry;
Clothes the lilies with His hand;
Numbereth the grains of sand;
Listens to the young lamb's bleating;
He will listen to the heart's low beating.
Rest secured and sweetly sleep,
For the Lord thy soul will keep.

"If I should die before I wake."
In the hour of early morning
When the day is brightly dawning:
'Mid the burning nood-tide sun;
When the day its course has run;
In the dismal midnight hour,
When the dark clouds round thee lower;
By the rushing river's side,
Or when borne upon its tide;
In the place, in the cot;
In seclusion's lowly lot;
Where, war's desolation raging,
Hostile armies are engaging;
O'er the hill or in the dale;
In the dim sepulchral vale;
In the field, or in the manger,
Never art thou free from danger.
What availeth human care?
Death is present everywhere,
And his bony hand is ever
Fitting arrows from his quiver:
Some fell shaft may pointed be
Even now at you or me:
Set on Slaughter, ne'er content,
Death's strong bow is ever bent:
Life's frail cord to-night may break—
I may die before I wake.

"I pray the Lord my soul to keep."
Could we live as God commands,
Seeking counsel at his hands;
Yielding to him every thought,
Leaning on Him for support,
He would keep us free from sin,
Fair without and pure within,
And no shade of guilt-born fear
Ever should our souls come near:
All our thoughts in goodness viewing,
Never should we shrink from dying,
But should ever ready stand
Waiting for the reaper's hand,
Bent upon a heavenly mission
It would be our hearts petition
Not to live and not to die,
Waiting for the morn to break
When the Lord our souls should take.

Little child, thou slumb'brest now;
Angels guard thy sinless brow;
Quiet are thy little feet,
And thy sleep is soft and sweet;
Let me kiss thy rosy cheek.
Little child so pure and meek,
Thou hast laid thee down to sleep—
May the Lord thy spirit keep;
To Himself that spirit take
Should'st thou die ere morning break!

THE WEB AND WOOF OF LIFE.

BY WILLIAM G. CAMBRIDGE.

CHAPTER XXVI.

WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

The next morning, my uncle, with mock gravity, congratulated me upon my improved appearance; then turned to Helen, and told her that she should have known better than to keep me up so late, for it was a well established fact that invalids required more rest and sleep than persons who were free from disease. He hoped she would remember this in the future. My aunt, good soul, laughed, and said, "No matter about established facts;—if a course of treatment produces good results, and restores the patient, that is enough."

A conversation of a more serious nature succeeded this pleasant raillery. Uncle and aunt proposed that when we were married we should live with them; and they would make over the farm to us, to be ours at their decease. I objected, on account of Mrs. Stewart; but they said the house was large enough for all, and that Mrs. Stewart should be welcome whenever she wished to change her home. We made a conditional agreement, which might have been carried into effect, had not an event happened which caused us to entirely change our plan.

At the appointed time, Thomas and Lizzie were married. They immediately left for their future home. Thomas and Mr. Harvey, the husband of Lizzie a brother of Thomas' wife, had purchased a paper-mill of Mr. Harvey's father, and they had formed a partnership with a Mr. Vinton, also a brother-in-law, for the purpose of manufacturing paper. As I had determined to turn my attention to farming, it was the desire of Thomas and the rest of the family that I should retain the homestead. Mrs. Stewart seemed anxious that I should do so. On the other hand, Helen was desirous that I should comply with my uncle's request, though she was willing to do as I thought best. I was halting between two opinions, when an unexpected development caused me to decide.

We were married, at my uncle's, in the following November. A large number of friends came to celebrate the happy event, and to bless us with their smiles and good wishes. Among the rest was Earnest and Irene Brown; or, as she wrote her name, Irene Dinneford Brown. They performed the part of bridegroom and bridemaid, as I had promised Ernest when he little suspected my meaning,

We returned with them on a marriage tour, to New York. We were in the city, at a hotel, when the startling revelation was made which rendered our future course perfectly clear. Previous to the development, Helen had related to me a somewhat remarkable vision or dream. She said that a good and benevolent looking man came to her, and laid his hand upon her head in benediction. His eyes were blue, and looked spiritual and holy, as they were fixed upon her. A smile full of sweetness and satisfaction played upon his benignant face.

He said, "Do you remember me?'

"I have a faint recollection of you," she answered; "I saw you when I was a little child."

"Who am I?"

"My father! But you have long been dead, and I had forgotten you!"

"I am your father, my child! And your mother,—would you know of her?"

"My mother! Where is she—with the living or the dead?"

"She lives, my child, and mourns thy loss! Go and comfort her!"

"Mourns for me? O, tell me where she is, that I may fly to her arms, and gladden her heart by the sight of her child!"

"Thy prayer shall be granted! Follow me!"

"He led me into the next room, and pointed me to a pale and sickly looking man, who lay, in a disturbed slumber upon the bed.

I looked at him attentively, and I saw that it was the melancholy invalid whom we had met at the table, and had seen going in and out the next room. He who had seemed my father said, 'Be like a child to him, and he shall direct you to your mother!' I was about to ask her name, when I awoke.

This dream made a deep impression upon Helen. She said she had often doubted whether those whom she had regarded as her parents were really so. She never recollected of having that love which a child should feel for a parent. And sometimes dim and confused thoughts had come crowding upon her, the cause of which she had sought for in vain. They ever ran upon one subject,—a country home, and a lady who seemed very near and dear to her. I tried to persuade her that it was because her parents had not treated her kindly; and, after placing her at Deacon Webber's, had apparently forgotten her.

"You are mistaken," she said; "for when I awoke from my dream I immediately traveled back in thought to the time when I was a little child, before I lived with Mr. Means; and I then lived with a dear, good woman, who was my mother. I am sure that it was in this country; I can see the spot now. And, unless I have had a previous existence, according to the faith of some, and had such a home then, it was my home in my early childhood!"

"Well, Helen," I replied, "as we are to start for home to-day, what can you do for the sick man?"

"We must not go to-day; I dare not! Do stay one day more!"

"It shall be as you say; and a week if you wish."

In the afternoon the sick man was taken bleeding at the lungs. The hemorrhage was so severe that a physician who was called said he could not live but a few days at most. I knew that he was a stranger, and I readily assented to Helen's request, that she should be his nurse. She attended him with all the faithfulness of a wife or daughter, and his gratitude was unbounded. Three days after the hemorrhage had been checked, and, as he had recovered somewhat from the exhaustion which it had caused, he expressed a desire to see me alone. With my curiosity very much excited, I obeyed the summons.

I found him propped up with pillows, looking pale and ghastly. He addressed me thus:

"I learn from your inestimable lady, that your name is Henri Eaton, and that you are from———, Mass."

I nodded assent..

"I feel," he continued, "that I have not long to live; and I wish to confide a sacred trust in you. Are you willing to accept it?"

"I am."

"My name is Edgar Austin. I have neither, father, mother, brother, sister wife or child, living. You see I am alone in the world; and therefore, I doubly appreciate the kindness which you and your lady have shown me. I once had a brother. He was older than I, and of an overbearing, jealous disposition. He was passionate and unforgiving. Such was his treatment of me, that I had but little love for him, and seldom visited him. Some fifteen years since, as I had not seen him four years, and as he had married in the time, I resolved to pay him a visit. Not knowing what the reception might be,—for we parted in anger,—I left my horse at the tavern, about a mile from my brother's, and went the rest of the way on foot. In order to shorten the distance, I concluded to leave the road, and pass through a piece of woodland near my brother's house. I had gone about half-way through, when I discovered a few rods from me, a man and a little girl, I stopped to learn if the man was not my brother. In a moment I was satisfied that it was he; but judge of my surprise and horror, to see him pick up a stone and strike the little girl on the head, which laid her bleeding at his feet! The monster then knelt down to see if she breathed, laid his hand upon her heart and felt her pulse. He then threw her into a hole some three feet deep, which had the appearance of having been dug some months before. He now set to work gathering leaves, and peices of rotton wood, which he trew on to her.

"So astounded was I to behold him commit such an atrocious deed, that the moment he struck the blow I was half paralyzed, so that I did not move. But, had he offered to strike her again, I think I should have thrown off my paralysis, and rushed to her rescue. But a moment's reflection taught me that to keep still would be the surest way to save the child. I knew that, if I met my brother then, a deadly encounter would be the result; and, as he was much the stronger, and to save himself he would take my life.

"When the wretch had completely covered her over, he ran, with great spead, towards his house. When I could no longer hear the sound of his heavy footsteps, I lost not a moment in hastening to where the child lay, and removing the rubbish that covered her. Poor little thing! how still she lay, and how pale and bloody she was! for the blood was still running from the deep gash upon her head.

"Having traveled much, and being an invalid for years, I had paid some attention to medicine, and never went any distance without carrying some with me. I had some drops in my pocket, which I applied to her nose and mouth. While thus employed I heard footsteps, and rightly surmised that the murderer was returning. As quick as thought I snatched her up, and darted into some thick bushes near by, resolved to fight the monster, if he discovered me. It was a relief to see him commence throwing in the loose gravel,—for he brought a spade with him,—without looking into the grave. In a brief space he filled up the hole, then levelled it down, and trod upon it with his feet. He then brought leaves, and decayed vegetable matter, and spread upon the spot, making the ground to look as though it had not lately been stirred. During this time, although he worked in great haste, he would frequently stop and listen, and, with a half-frightened look, gaze in every direction, as though he was fearful some one was approaching. When, as he thought, he had fully accomplished his diabolical purpose, he returned home.

"I was now determined to restore the child to life, if possible. I poured the drops into her mouth, chafed her hands, face and stomach, and used every means in my power to restore her. In a brief period I was repaid a thousand times, by beholding signs of returning animation. She soon began to moan piteously! but removing her still further from the hated spot, and from the house of my brother, lest he might hear her, I laid her down by the side of a little creek, and washed the blood from her head and face, and tied up the wound with my handkerchief. I then soothed her to sleep. It was now quite dark; and I took her in my arms, and carried her beyond the hotel, and laid her down in a field, near the road. I then returned for my horse, rode to where I left the child, took her in and drove rapidly away.

"I now began to ask myself, seriously what should I do with the child. Some fifteen miles from where I then was lived a surgeon, with whom I was intimately acquainted. I resolved to drive to his house with all speed; for I thought the wound should be dressed with as little delay as possible. I was so fortunate as to find him at home. I told him that I had a little girl with me who had fallen out of the chaise and hurt her head badly, but I hoped not fatally. He examined the wound, and dressed it, and said there was no danger if it were properly attended to. I remained there three days, when, with his consent, I carried the little girl to Boston, and, in a short time, her wound was perfectly healed.

"It was my desire, now, to restore the child to her parents, if I could find them; but I did not wish to endanger the life and liberty of my brother, for I feared the disgrace. It might be possible that she had lived with him, he having taken her from the poor-house, or from some destitue family; or, perchance, she was a child of shame, and, possibly, his own. I met with one difficulty which I had not anticipated. When I asked the little girl her name, she could not tell me. She seemed to try to think, but, after a while, burst into tears. The blow upon her head had affected her memory. I then resolved to visit the neighborhood where my brother lived, and if any little child was missing, restore her th her parents, and invent some story in relation to her, so as to shield myself and brother. But, as I was about to start on a foreign tour, and the ship being unexpectedly ready to sail, I could not go without much inconvenience and expense. I then procured a place for her with a poor family, where she could board cheap; and, paying her board for one year, set sail for Liverpool. It so happened that business detained me a number of years; but I continued to make remittances, from year to year, for the support of the child, until I returned to Boston. When I did return, the family was not to be found, and I have sought in vain to trace them.

"I now feel that it was an unpardonable offence in consenting to leave Boston, on any consideration, without making an effort to find her parents. You live in the town adjoining where my brother resided. I am extremely anxious that the girl, if living, should be found. I have property to the amount of seven thousand five hundred dollars, which I shall give to her. The whole business I must intrust in your hands, and I will make ample provision for your trouble and expense. Five hundred dollars out of my estate I have reserved for that purpose, with a provision in the will, that more shall be used, if required. You must first learn who were her parents, and then advertise for her until you find her. I should have done it, ere now, but one of my most fatal propensities was to put off sacred duties to a more convenient time. By giving way to this feeling, I have lost many opportunities of doing good, and have left a burden upon my heart which I am now little able to bear. My brother is dead, and I have never been in the town where he lived since I learned that in his heart my brother was a murderer."

"Your story," I remarked, "is a strange one," hardly able to suppress my agitation. "Did you give the child a name?"

"No, for I thought that in a short time her memory might be restored to her; and I left orders that, if she ever told her name, search should be made for her parents, and she restored to them. But Means was a poor, shiftless fellow."

"Means, did you say?"

"Yes, that is the name of the family where I placed her to board."

"It is she!" I exclaimed, without being aware that I was thinking aloud. "It is my Helen! God be thanked!"

"What are you talking about?" he inquired, raising his head, quickly. "Of whom do you speak? What Helen do you refer to?"

"Calm yourself, my dear sir," I replied far from being in that state myself. "I have good reasons for believing that the lost child and my wife are the same."

"Impossible! What proof have you? For God's sake tell me!"

"I beg you to be calm, or I cannot proceed. Too much excitement may cause death immediately."

"Well, you are right. I will be calm; only give me the proof, which you should have, before making such a statement to a dying man. Unless you give me such proof, I shall believe you a villain, seeking by false pretensions, to get into your posession the property I have given to another."

"You are suspicious of me, sir; but I pardon you. Listen patiently, and you shall know all."

I gave him a clear, simple and distinct account of all the facts in the case. These facts the reader is already acquainted with, but I will briefly allude to them. Mrs. Stewart lived near the brother of the sick man, and her little girl mysteriously disappeared; and, a few months afterwards, this brother confessed that he was her murderer. Helen Means had lived in Boston, with her parents, as she supposed, previous to living with Deacon Webber. The night on which Helen came to my mother's dressed in a suit of my clothes, Mrs. Stewart was much agitated when Helen gave her a grateful look for the kind words she had spoken to her. Once or twice afterwards the same thing had occurred. Many doubts had crept into the mind of Helen in relation to her parents, and her thoughts went beyond her home in Boston, to a pleasant little home in the country. Mr. Austin, our sick friend, saw his brother strike the child, and throw her into a hole intended for her grave. But he saved her, restored her to life, and placed her to board with a family by the name of Means. With this chain of facts, there was no room for doubt. When I had finished, he exclaimed,

"God be praised! The proof is as clear as light. The mother will again embrace her long-lost child, and my property will be amply sufficient to make her old age cheerful; and I shall atone, in a measure, for the wrong I have done."

"You must remember, my dear sir, that you saved the life of the noble being who is now my wife."

"I do remember it; but I only did my duty, and that does not justify my neglect of duty afterwards."

"It will be well to let that pass out of your mind. We all owe you very much. Helen was restored to life by you, and she is unconsciously doing something to repay the debt she owes you, by smoothing your way to the tomb."

"She has been very kind, and it brings consolation to my heart; for it seems as though God had sent her to me to solace my last hours, and assure me of forgiveness."

"A beautiful thought, and I am glad that it has come to you; for it will do you good. She must seem like a dear child to you."

"You are very good. I do not doubt what you have told me, sir; but I wish to see your wife alone."

In accordance with his wishes, I rang for Helen, and when she came I left the room. I was recalled in the course of half an hour. I found Helen's face streaming with tears, and yet its expression was the most thankful, heavenly and beautiful, that I even witnessed. It seemed like a transfigoration, it was so glorious. The sick man gazed upon her as though she had been an angel sent from heaven to guide him through the valley of the shadow of death.

Helen rejoiced to learn that Mrs. Stewart was her mother, for she knew that the knowledge of the fact would be heaven to her; and then she loved her so well and could now love her still more dearly. She was thankful that it had been so ordered that she should be with her preserver in his last hours, to hear the truth from his own lips, and smooth, with loving hands, the bed of sickness and death. She wept that she must part with him so soon, but they were tears of reconciliation.

It was beautiful to witness the mutual faith and trust which were now manifested. He called her his child—his dear child—and wanted her ever near him. She anticipated every want, and held him by the hand, and gently chafed his forehead, and addressed to him words of affection and filial endearment.

"Shall I bathe your head, father?" she would ask.

"Yes, dear child," would be the reply.

And so it was, all day long, and all night long, except when he slept, or she absented herself for a brief repose.

After lingering for a few days, he slept the sleep of death, closing his eyes in holy calmness, and bidding us an affectionate farewell.

"O, Lelia!" said he; "sweet and angelic has been your care for me, and on the wings of your beautiful and heavenly love shall my soul be lifted to God!"

At our request, the families of Mr. Dineford and Mr. Brown united with us in the last sad offices of respect and love. We followed him to his grave, and stood over it and wept; and when we retraced our steps there were tears in our eyes, but smiles in our hearts.

We remain in New York a few days longer, keeping perfectly quiet, that Helen might recruit her waisted energies; and then, with chastened feelings and a larger faith, we started for home.

Mrs. Stewart received us with the most endearing affection; and, after embracing us both, she said,

"I hope, my dear children, that you have now decided to make this your home."

"Yes, dear mother," I answered, "we shall gladly live with you, and beautiful shall be your life with us."

I uttered these words with the greatest difficulty, and Helen trembled like a leaf, and she leaned heavily upon me for support, and the tears fell rapidly which she struggled in vain to suppress. She would have sprang into her mother's arms, but I gently restrained her.

"Thank you, my dear boy; and is Helen willing to live here with me? She is weeping;—is it for joy or grief?"

"For joy!—only for joy; for our Lelia is very glad to have such a sweet, sweet home as this."

"Lelia! Lelia! O, gracious Father! But you made a mistake, Henri, for Lelia is in heaven."

I could retrain her no longer. She sprang from my arms, and folded her mother to her heart, exclaiming,

"Mother! my own mother! Your child! Your own child!—Your own lost Lelia!"

Mrs. Stewart clasped her arms around her child, and held her tightly for a moment, and then her hands dropped, her face grew white as death, and she would have fallen, if I had not caught her in my arms; for Helen was too much weakened by the feelings and emotions which shook her frame like a reed.

In a brief period, by the application of proper remedies, she was restored to consciousness. Helen was bending over her when she opened her eyes. As week as she was, she flung her arms around her neck, and kissed her passionately, exclaiming,

"You are my Lelia! I know you are. But, how can it be? But those eyes! hair! expression! God be praised! O, my child! what a world of happiness you bring to this long desolate heart! Henri, my son, come and tell me all,—tell me how you learned that Helen Means was my own dear child!"

I gladly complied with her request; and when I had finished the strange narrative, she said, "It must be so! The lost is found! The dead is alive again! God bless you, my dear children! What moments, hours, days and years of suffering, have I endured! But this hour repays it all. With my own dear ones shall I pass triumphantly and hopefully to my grave!"

"You may expect to see many happy years ere that sad hour shall come," I remarked.

"Blessed years, with your children to comfort you, my mother," said Helen.

"Ah! yes, most blessed. I have ever loved you both, but I knew not how near and dear you would one day become. But this is too much joy for me. I would share it with all the world, and then my heart would be full. Send for all of our friends and let us rejoice together."

In accordance with her suggestion, we sent invitations to all of our relatives and friends. They came,—our brothers and sisters, uncles and aunts, friends and neighbors. After we had partaken of a sumptuous dinner, I gave them the strange narrative. When I had concluded, surprise and wonder where depicted upon every countenance. Expressions like these were heard: "Wonderful!" "A miricle!" "Stranger than fiction!" "If the proof were not so positive, I could not believe it!" Then followed showers of congratulations, and a spirit of subdued joy beamed from every face. We were all happy, and the faint light in the east showed that another day was about to dawn upon the world ere our guests had retired or departed for their homes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3, 1863.

The panic has served some good purposes. Among other things it has taught us the value of greenbacks. It has taught us to appreciate certain features of our financial system. In all previous panics we have had a very different experience from that we have just passed through or rather that which we are now passing through. In the panic of 1857, in that of 1847, and in that of 1837, the paper money of those times depreciated terribly in value. The money in the pocket of the workingman, in the drawer of the merchant and in the vaults of the bank become worthless, or nearly so. In our present case we find the value of our currency growing. we find how much we really think of it. When our confidence in banks and other monied institutions fade away our faith in soundness of our currency grows stronger and stronger, till we find ourselves satisfied only when we have our wealth all invested in it. In a word, we prefer the "promise to pay" given by the government to any other promises, even to the promises of the strongest and wealthiest private institutions of the land.

Now, to whom shall we render our thanks for this circulating medium in which we place so great confidence? In the Democratic party? It was the Democratic party which gave us those schemes of wild-cat banks whose notes flooded the country during the crisises of '37, '47, and '57. It was the Republican party which gave us the money that we think so much of in the crisis of 1873. Not until the battle is over will we begin to truly appreciate the real value of our present currency. Not until the smoke has cleared away will we begin to realize how much we owe to that feature of our financial system which gave us green backs and established national banks whose circulating notes are secured by deposits of United States bonds in the Treasury.

But there is danger even in this very confidence manifested in our circulating medium. There is danger of our thinking so much of it that we will demand greater issues of it, and thus make it so plenty and so common that its value will become less. We have just witnessed how an almost irresistible pressure has been brought upon the President and his advisers to induce them to unlock the vaults of the Treasury and flood the country with money. Thanks to the iron firmness of our chief magistrate, he was able to resist the appeals of the wild and maddened brokers of Wall streets, and our circulation is still kept within reasonable limits.

It is possible, yes it is probable, we will even yet feel the evil effects of the increased amount of circulation resulting from the purchase of bonds. Let us hope, however, that the increase has been so small that the evil will be imperceptible. It is one of the plainest and one of the most indisputable of facts, and it is a principle taught in every work on political economy, that the more plenty an article becomes the less value does it have. This principle must be modified, however, by the proviso that the wants of the age or demands of the people for such article remains constant. Thus modified there is no exception to the principle. Even gold forms no exception. Were the precious metals of the world doubled in quantity there value would be diminished to just one-half. A doubling of the amount of gold in the world would not increase its purchasing power one iota. Paper representatives of money cannot be an exception to the rule. We have now in circulation in this country about seven hundred million dollars in Treasury notes and national bank notes. Make it fourteen hundred million dollars and two dollars would buy no more than one dollar does now. But the evils of an inflated currency do not stop with a mere general enhancement of prices. If so it could scarcely be called an evil. It would matter but little if the laborer had to pay sixteen dollars a barrel for flour instead of eight provided he received in wages four dollars a day instead of two. All past experience tells us that there is a proportion between the amount of paper money and the gold upon whose value it is based that must be maintained. When that proper proportion is exceeded all relations seem to be destroyed and interminable difficulties begin to arise.

What we want in this country is a paper currency whose value shall equal that of gold. Many prominent financiers are even now urging that the present is a good time to resume specie payment I am not prepared to subscribe to this opinion, but I feel that this is an excellent time to discuss the question of resumption.

—The public debt statement for the month of September shows a reduction of $1,901,467.16, which is much less than usual. We are no longer diminishing the debt at the rate of eighty or a hundred millions annually. However, we are doing well as it is. The total amount of the debt is now (or was on the morning of the 1st inst.,) $2,138,793,-898.17. The total interest-bearing debt is $1,769,826,560. Of this amount $1,235,000,000 bears interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, $488,567,200 at five per cent. and $678,000 at four per cent. The last rate is in legal currency.

The amount of cash in the Treasury is—coin $80,246,757—currency $3,289,032—special deposits for the redemption of coin certificates $11,250,000—in all, $94,775,789.

The accrued interest on the entire debt amounts to $31,688,780. The legal-tenders and fractional currency is $402,309,134. Of this $356,079,742 is legal-tenders and $46,259,391 fractional currency.

—The Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1872 has just been issued from the press, and is in every respect equal to its predecessors. Five thousand copies were ordered printed by the Senate for its own use, and the Department has had a very few extra copies struck off for special purposes, but there has been no provision made for its publication for purposes of general distribution. This is to be regretted, as a great many of the most intelligent farmers of the country have learned to rely greatly upon the information they glean from this valuable work. The failure to provide for the general distribution of the Agricultural Report is doubtless owing to the repeal of the franking privilege, but this is evidence of the short-sightedness of those men in Congress who have such matters in charge. That there is really no expence connected with the distribution of these documents is plain enough when we consider that the amount paid out by the Department of Agriculture in sending them out, that is in the purchase of the necessary stamps for the payment of postage, is, on the other hand, taken in by the Post Office Department. What one department pays out another receives, and the government is no loser. It is to be hoped that at the next session of Congress our national legislators will take a broader view of this question and adopt measures for the general dissemination of such information as is to be found in this report of Commissioner Watts.

—Doubtless the redoubtable Captain Jack and his accomplices in the murder of the peace commissioners have before this time paid the penalty on the gallows. Like Major Andre this "noble red man of the forest" preferred being shot to being hung, but in this choice of the modes of death, his wishes were disregarded, and he had to take that method which is ordinarily considered most ignominious.

Two of the convicted Indians, Sloluck and Barncho, were fortunate enough to get off with a lighter punishment than death. President Grant took the view that these men held the same relations to Captain Jack that a soldier does to his superior officer and were therefore not in the same degree as he responsible for their acts. He therefore commuted their sentence to imprisonment for life, at Alcatraz Island, California.

JUST OUT—THE NEW LIGHT RUNNING

HOWE

Sewing Machine

THE GRANDEST PRODUCTION OF INVENTIVE GENIUS.

The new factory of the Howe Company is nearly completed, and 1000

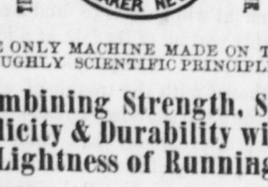
ARE NOW BEING MANUFACTURED AND SOLD DAILY!

The total number sold last year was 220,000, which far exceeds the sales of any other single machine.



THE ONLY MACHINE MADE ON THOROUGHLY SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES.

Combining Strength, Simplicity & Durability with Lightness of Running.

It is superior to all in the following respects:
1st. Simplicity of construction.
2nd. Ease of management.
3d. Lightness of running.
4th. Non-liability to get out of repair.
5th. Durability—It being made of the finest hardened steel.
6th. Perfection of tension on both upper and lower threads, and the ease with which they are controlled by the operator. It makes a perfect Lock Stitch on all kinds of goods and never breaks the thread.
7th. The strength and regularity of the new feed, which enables it to stitch soft or glazed, light, or heavy work equally well, and to cross heavy seams or fells without the slightest difficulty.

The new improved HEMMER, FELLER, QUILTER and GUIDE; Also, BRAIDER, OILER, BOTTLE OIL, DOZ. NEEDLES, BOBBINS, &c., go with each Machine free of charge. In addition to these, we will give a Ruffler and an alpaca Hemmer with each machine, making more attachments than are given with any machine in use

A POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK SYSTEM.

The financial convulsions of the past three weeks have had the effect of bringing to the front a proposition that had almost been lost sight of. It has renewed the agitation of the question of establishing a post office savings bank system somewhat similar to the system now in operation in Great Britain, where it has met with great success. Postmaster General Creswell, is heartily in favor of the proposition; indeed it is one of two favorite ideas with him. He is determined to do everything in his power to improve his department, and every project that bids fair to add to its usefulness at once elicits his support. His other pet scheme is postal telegraphy, a feature of the British postal system in successful operation. The proposition to have the government purchase and control all the telegraph lines in the country was warmly discussed in Washington, last winter. Of course it met with the violent opposition of all the telegraph monopolists, prominent among whom was Mr. Orton, superintendent of that vast institution the Western Union. The dission ended in nothing, for it is quite evident that the tendency of public opinion in this country is toward the laisser faire (let alone) theory of government. Public septiment will not admit of the government engagiag in industrial enterprises of any kind unless the chances are very strong that it will be able to transact the business in question in a better and cheaper and more satisfactory manner than any private concern would do it. We have laid aside our non-interference policy in the case of the Post Office Department proper, and are constantly drifting farther in the direction of —shall I say it?—communism. The very word communism is a terrible bugbear to most people; indeed there are but few people who have really taken the trouble to inquire what communism consits of. The Post Office is clearly a communistic institution. The communists propose to apply the same theory to all branches of industry. The money-order business is but another step in the direction of communism. It is not so horrible a thing after all. The proposition to make each post-office a savings bank is a suggestion to take another step. Even the Treasury Department is communistic so far as it undertakes to furnish the paper money which comprises the circulating medium of the country. Indeed it is surprising how far we have gone in this direction without knowing it.

Upon being chided with favoring everything of British origin in postal matters Mr. Creswell very pleasantly admitted that the charge was to some extent true. We have copied after the British system in a great many things. Our entire postal system is mainly a copy of the British. The money-order system was copied from the British. The postal card system also had its origin there. But Mr. Creswell does not regard this fact as being against him. He argues that it would be foolish, it would be squeamish, it would be unpatriotic, to refuse to adopt a good thing simply because some other nation had got ahead of us. He says the English government has better opportunities than we for making experiments owing to the more limited extent of their territory. For the same reason the results of their experimentations become more readily ascertained. He argues that whatever proves to be good in Great Britain, after being thoroughly tested there, is likely to prove to be a good thing here. He therefore believes in availing ourselves of the advantages afforded by the experimentations of our neighbors.

This proposition to establish post office savings banks has the merit of simplicity. Each post office, it is suggested, will become a branch of a great national savings bank, where money can be deposited to draw interest at four per cent. per annum. The money thus deposited will be invested in government securities. Under this system the people will have the advantage of an absolutely safe deposit for their surplus cash, and the government will be able to fund a considerable portion of its debt at a low rate of interest. The people will not be bothered with the trouble of examining into the soundness of the institution, as everybody has confidence in the stability of the government.

These are a few of the considerations which speak for the adoption of the system. There are objections of course. For instance, it will be argued that it offers further inducements to fraud on the part of postmasters. This may, perhaps, be remedied. At all events the subject is one of sufficient importance to warrant our giving it serious thought.

Italian harpist's were most as thick as split tickets were yesterday .....Col. Johnson, President of Pa. & Western R.R. was in town again on Monday, looking up matters.....Honeyfuggling meant, yesterday, to fool a fellow out of his vote by some hokus-pokus.....Competition yesterday made the marrow lively.

DIED.

At Linden Hall, Oct. 7th 1873, Sidney, the only child of William D. and Mary O. Ross, aged 2 years, 2 months and 6 days.

"Once more! Once more!
We shall behold his face, and clasp his hand!
Once more—forever more!"
Take up the cross where your little one laid it down,
Take up the song, where he broke of the strain:
So journeying till you reach the heavenly town,
Where are laid up your treasures and your crown,
And your lost loved one will be found again.

OUT OF WONDER AT LAST.—The Howe Sewing Machine Co. advertise "The Light Running Howe." I did not know what it meant as it takes a horse-power to run them, until the other day I saw an agent running one with castors on it, over the floor at the exhibition house at the Fair ground. That's what they mean by calling it the "Light Running Howe." It runs light on castors.

COSMOLINE is the concentrated extract of the healing properties of Petroleum, which are known. It is the most bland and soothing remedy ever used; beside possessing more healing power than any substance or compound ever prepared. It is for almost all the daily casualties which occur in household, the workshop, or on the farm, as well as for many of the diseases which afflict humanity.

FOR BURNS AND SCALDS

It is invaluable, cooling and soothing the injured parts at once, and producing a perfect cure in a very short time, without leaving any scars. For this purpose alone, it is

A BLESSING TO THE WORLD,

FOR FROSTED LIMBS, COSMOLINE is fully as efficacious as for burns and scalds, restoring a healthy action to the injured parts very quickly. It is also the best possible remedy for Chilblains and Chapped Hands.

FOR RHEUMATISM especially Inflammatory, most forms of NEURALGIA, swelling of Limbs or Glands, COSMOLINE affords in the shortest possible time the HAPPIEST RELIEF.

In CUTS AND BRUISES, the action of COSMOLINE is almost magical. If promptly applied, it prevents soreness, and the wounds heal very rapidly.

FOR PILES, it has proved to be an unequalled remedy, and many a sufferer has blessed the day of its introduction.

FOR SKIN DISEASES we can recommend it with the greatest confidence, especially for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, etc., and Teething humours.

We might go on enumerating the many other conditions for which it is unequalled, but will only add that wherever there is inflammation from any cause, COSMOLINE brings a rapid and happy relief, and will be the dependence under all circumstances. COSMOLINE is Prescribed by the best physicians, both allopathic and homeopathic. It is but nature's own production, brought into an agreeable and pleasant condition, and is as safe to use anywhere as fresh cream.

HOUSEHOLD SURGEON'S

NOT A PATENT MEDICINE,

THE NIGHT IS CLOSING, MOTHER.

The night is closing round, mother!
The shadows are thick and deep!
All round me they clug, like an iron ring,
And I can not--can not sleep!

Ah, Heaven! thy hand, thy hand, Mother!
Let me lie on thy nursing breast!
They have smitten my brain, with a peircing pain;
But 'tis gone!—and I now shall rest.

I could sleep a long, long sleep, Mother!
So, seek me a calm cool bed!
You may lay me low, in the virgin snow,
With a moss bank for my head,

I would lie in the wild, wild woods, Mother!
Where naught but the birds are known:
Where nothing is seen, but the branches green,
And flowers on the green sward strewn.

No lovers there which the air, Mother!
Nor mock at the holy sky:
One may live and beggy, like a summer day,
And at last like the summer—die!

The Modoc Execution.

THE EXECUTION WITNESSED BY OVER FIVE HUNDRED INDIANS.

JACKSONVILLE, OREGON, OCT. 3.—Your correspondent left Fort Klamath this morning at 10:30 o'clock, and by hard riding arrived here a few moments ago. The following is a report of the execution of captain Jack and his band: Boston Charley and Black Jim were led on the scaffold first and Sckonchin next; they trod on with apparent indifference and iron nerve, having evidently resolved to die as brave as they had lived. Jack went easily up the stairway but looked wretched and miserable. The manacles had been struck off, but their arms were securely pinioned with cords. At precisely 9:45 A. M. the interpreters, Capt. O. C. Appleton and David Hill, explained to the culprits the nature of the order to be read to them by the Adjutant and at 10 A. M. Adjutant Kingsbury read the orders of the Secretary and the department commander in the premises.

The two reprived prisoners, Barncho and Slolouck, yet stood on the ground in front of the scaffold, under guard and shackled. During the leading the pinioned victims were seated on the platform of the scaffold, with their feet on the drop listening anxiously, but of course not understanding a word of it.

The reading occupied ten minutes; then the Adjutant read the order of commutation in the case of Barncho and Slolack, and the poor fellows were taken back to the stockade, evidently happy at not accompanying the others to the happy hunting grounds. The chaplain then offered an earnest and fervent prayer for the souls of the culprits, which was listened to attentively.

At 10:15 the fatal nooses were placed around the necks of the condemned, under the direction of Captain Hoge. It was necessary to cut off a little of Jack's long hair which was in the way of the rope. Captain Hoge then bid farewell to the prisoners, and the black caps were placed on the heads of the culprits; it must have been an awful moment.

At 10:20 they stood on the drop; the rope was cut by the assistant at a signal made with Captain Hoge's handkerchief. The bodies swung around, Jack and Jim appearently dying easily, but Boston and Schonchin suffered terrible convulsions. Boston and Schonchin repeatedly drew up their legs, but the two others seemed to die almost instantly. At 10:28 their pulses were felt by Captain Hoge, and as I write they are swinging lifeless in the air. As the drop fell with a terrible thud four poor wretched human beings fell into eternity, and a half smothered cry of horror went up from the crowd of over five hundred Klamath Indians, who witnessed the awful spectacle.

Wails of deep and bitter anguish went up from the stockade, where the wives and children of the poor fellows had a fair view of the shocking scene. The coffins, six in number, had been placed directly in the rear of the gallows, two of them destined to be unoccupied.

The order commuting the sentence of Brancho and Sloluck only arrived at 10:30 last evening, and preparations had been made for them likewise.

An application was made this morning by the Sherriff of Jackson county, for the custody of the Indians indicted by the Grand Jury to General Wheaton but it was refused.

"Do you like chickens?" asked a remarkably modest Nashville youth of his sweetness, as he was walking about two feet away from her on his way to church, Sunday night.

"Certainly I do," she replied; "why do you ask such a question as that!"

"Because I thought if you liked chickens, you wouldn't object to takin a wing," and he crooked his arm in an irresistable manner. Sweetness took a wing.

Hard Work.

"What is your secret of success?" asked a lady of Turner, the distinguished painter. He replied, "I have no secret, Madam, but hard work."

Says Dr. Arnold, "the difference between one boy and another is not so much in talent as in energy."

"Nothing," says Reynolds "is denied well directed labor, and nothing is to be attained without it."

"Excellence in my department," says Johnson, "can now be obtained only by the labor of a lifetime; it is not to be purchased at a lesser price."

"There is but one method," said Sidney Smith, "and that is hard labor; and a man who will not pay that price for distinction had better at once dedicate himself to the pursuits of the fox."

"Step by step," reads the French proverb, "one goes very far."

"Nothing," says Mirabeau, "is impossible to the man who can will: 'Is that necessary?' 'That shall be.' This is the only law of success."

"Have you ever entered a cottage, ever traveled in a coach, ever talked with a peasant in the field, or loitered with a mechanic at the loom," says Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, "and not found that each of those men had a talent you had not, knew something you knew not?"

The most useless creature that ever yawned at a club, or counted the vemin on his rags under the sun of Calabria, has no excuse for want of intellect. What men want is not talent, it is purpose; in other words not the power to achieve, but the will to labor. I am no believer in genius, but I believe that labor, judiciously and continuously applied, becomes a genius.—Boston Investigator.

The Value of Time.

One fine morning when Benjamin Franklin was busy preparing his newspaper for the press, a lounger stepped into the store and spent an hour or more looking over the books, &c. Finally taking one in his hand he asked the price.

"One dollar."

"One dollar!" said he. "Can't you take less than that?"

"No, indeed; that is the price."

Another hour was nearly passed when the lounger said:

"Is Mr. Franklin at home?"

"Yes, he is the printing office."

"I want to see him."

The boy immediately informed Mr. Franklin that there was a gentleman in the store waiting to see him.

Franklin was soon behind the counter, when the lounger, book in hand, addressed him thus:

"Franklin, what is the lowest you can take for this book?"

"One dollar and a quarter."

"One dollar and a quarter! Why, your young man asked only one dollar."

"True," said Franklin, "and I could have better afforded to take a dollar than to have been taken out of the office."

The lounger seemed surprised, and wishing to end the parley of his own making, said:

"Come, Mr. Franklin, what is the lowest you can take for it?"

"One dollar and a half."

"A dollar and a half! Why, you offered it yourself for a dollar and a quarter."

"Yes," said Franklin, "and I had better taken that than a dollar and a half now."

The lounger paid down the price and went about his business—if he had any—and Franklin returned to the printing office.

Womanly Modesty.

Man loves the mysterious. A cloudless sky, a full-blown rose, leaves him unmoved; but the violet which hides blushing behind the bush, and the moon, when she emerges from behind a cloud, are to him sources of inspiration and pleasure. Modesty is to merit what shade is to figure in painting; it gives it boldness and prominence. Nothing adds more to female beauty than modesty, it sheds around the countenance a halo of light which is borrowed from virtue. Botanists have given the rosy hue which tinge the cup of the rose the name of the "maiden's blush." The pure and delicate hue is the only paint that Christian virtue should use, it is the richest ornament. A woman without modesty is like a faded flower which diffuses an unwholesome odor, and which the prudent gardener will throw from him. Her destiny is melancholy, for it ends in shame and repentance. Beauty passes like the flower of the aloe, which blooms and dies in a few hours, but modesty gives the female character charms which supply this transitory freshness of youth.

THE new discoveries in Egypt will add plausibility to Wendell Phillips' lecture on "Lost Arts." It now appears that the smelting of iron was carried on in Egypt from the very earliest period. Mr. Charles Vincent, in an English scientific journal, sets forth some new facts in reference to this subject: "In the sepulchres of Thebes may be found deliniations of butchers sharpening their knives on round bars of iron attached to their aprons the blades of the knives are painted blue, which fact proves that they were of steel, for in the tomb of Rameses III, this color is used to indicate steel, bronze being indicated by red. An English gentleman has recently discovered near the wells of Moses, near the Red Sea, the remains of iron works so vast that they must have employed thousands of workmen. These works are supposed to be at least three thousand years old.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXECUTOR'S SALE:—On Wednesday, Oct. 15, 1873, will be sold at public sale the large farm of the late David Harpster, deceased, situated in Furguson twp., about one and a half miles from Penn's. SAPOLIO for Cleaning your House will save the labor of one cleaner. Give it a trial.

SAPOLIO

for Windows is better than Whiting or Water. No removing curtains or carpets cleans Paint and Wood, in fact the whole house, better than Soap. No slopping.—Saves labor. You can't afford to be without it.

SAPOLIO

SAPOLIO

for Scouring Knives is better and cleaner than Bath Brick. Will not scratch.

SAPOLIO

is better than Soap and Sand for polishing Tinware. Brightens without scratching.

SAPOLIO

Polishes Brass and Copper utensils better than Acid or Oil and Rotten Stone.

SAPOLIO

for Washing Dishes and Glassware is invaluable. Cheaper than Soap.

SAPOLIO

removes Stanes from Marble Mantels, Tables and Statuary, from Hard-finished Walls, and from China and Porcelain.

SAPOLIO

removes Stains and Grease from Carpets or other woven fabrics.

There is no one article known that will do so many kinds of work and do it as well as Sapolio. Try it.

HAND SAPOLIO

a new and wonderfully effective Toilet Soap, having no equal in this country or abroad.

HAND SAPOLIO

as an article for the Bath. "reaches the foundation" of all dirt, opens the pores and gives a healthy action and brilliant tint to the skin.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this epartment of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

Feeding Cattle.

The plan of cutting the fodder and mixing the meal fed to cows with it and feeding it moistened is preferable in our opinion to any other method. By feeding meal dry or made into dough, some portion of it will pass into the fourth stomach and escape only partially digested. The plan of mixing the meal with water and making a drink is preferable to feeding it dry or in a doughy state. The meal then passes, as it does when mixed with the feed, into the rumen or paunch whence it is passed, after undergoing rumination, into the reticulum or second stomach in a condition fitted for perfect digestion in the third and fourth stomachs and the bowels.

Persistant Advertising.

Advertising as the means of prosperity, says the Pittsburg Commercial, is not as well understood as it should be. Nothing can take its place. It is a fact that no one who has advertised liberally and systematically has felt like disputing that it was the best spent money he had put into his business. As a horse was never made fat by a single bushel of oats, so a single advertisement is never a perfect test of the benefits of advertising. The man with genuine wares to sell who advertised them in the right way without success would be a curiosity.

GOOD ADVICE.—Girls, let us tell you a stubborn truth! No young woman ever looks so well to a sensible young man, as when dressed in a plain, neat, modest attire, without a single ornament about her person. She looks then as though she possessed worth in herself, and needed no artificial rigging to enhance her value. If a young woman would spend so much time in cultivating her mind, training her temper, and cherishing kindness, meekness, mercy, and other good qualities, as most of them do in extra dress and ornaments, to increase their personal charms, she would, at a glance, be known among a thousand—her character would be read in her countenance.

A girl of the season comments thus on Mormonism: "How absurd! four or five wives to one man, when the fact is, each woman in these times ought to have four or five husbands. It would take about that number to support me decently."

Iron in the Blood
PERUVIAN SYRUP
AN IRON TONIC
MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

——Conundrum: who is elected? Answer next week.

——There's always a calm after the storm, we feel it coming.

——We were pleased to see the venerable Griffin Rote and lady at the Fair on Thursday.

——Joseph Baker, Esq., has the thanks of our whole gang for a fine lot of apples, and other fruits presented us.

——Messers J. A. G. White and J. P. Hale, coal and lumber dealers of Osceola, were among the visitors at the Fair.

——R. H. Duncan, Esq., of Spring Mills gave much valuable assistance to the management at the Fair last week.

——Don't cut the ticket any more,—stay at home cut firewood, get your hair cut, but don't disturb the political cuticle. It's wrong.

——C. W. Rote, Esq., leather merchant and manufacturer, from Clinton Co., encouraged the cause of agriculture with his handsome presence on last Thursday.

——Doctor Sterns, an itinerant physician, explained all his new and novel theories to a half dozen strangers in Reynold's Hall on Friday. It was called a lecture.

——The late contest was a warm one and we may have said many things, in the heat of the battle, that was aggravating, but if we have said anything we're sorry for, we are glad of it!

——We learn that the proprietors have appointed James Welch & Co. agents for this county, for the sale of their celebrated Bank of England Writing Fluid. Give him a trial.

——Several slight accidents occurred during the Fair last week, but locals appear to be plenty and we were lending our aid to the cause of agriculture, hence we will not immortalize the victims.

——The Berger Bell Ringers had a pair of $300 houses last week. Their entertainment was the best of the kind ever brought to Bellefonte, Sol Smith Russel, the comedian, is a curiosity that all were pleased with.

——The Central Seminary in Half Moon twp. closed for the fall vacation on last Friday. The concluding exercises were held in the church adjoining the school. Miss Rachel Right, the teacher received enconiums on all sides. Her school will reopen on the 2nd, of November.

——Col. D. J. Pruner showed us a horse shoe yesterday that was made in "three seconds." It had the shape, flanges, nail-holes and every thing complete to fasten upon the hoof of the horse. It was made by the patent Horse Shoe Machine of Col. Pruner's own invention. This machine, a curiosity in itself, makes a shoe full and complete in one operation, and at the rate of 20 shoes per minute. Pruner's Horse shoe factory will be in full operation at Millesburg on or about the first of November.

BUFFALO.—We were shown last week the skin of the head and neck of a Buffalo. This curiosity was part of the head-works of a large Buffalo killed on the 5th of July, in Osborn County, Kansas, by Isaac Kaup, Jacob C. Markle and Geo. K. Baker, all citizens of Harris township, this county. The animal when dressed weighed over 900 pounds. One of its ribs (the fifth we think) measured twenty inches. It took eight well directed rifle shots to kill it.

——A young attorney of this place hired a horse and buggy on Saturday to go to Half Moon. Saturday night was a cool one and, at two o'clock A. M., the wise animal, concluding that it was time for everybody to be in bed started for home. This disturbed the lovers. A prompt search revealed the fact that the horse was gone and that a suspicious individual was lurking around the barn. In a few subsequent minutes the lawyer had arrived at his father's house, two miles away. It was plain to all that the horse had been stolen. Early on Sabbath morning runners were dispatched over the neighborhood, to detect the thief and recover thet horse. The hero of this tale brought up in Bellefonte as the church-bells were ringing and found the horse safe in the stable. The beast wasn't used to country courting.

MELANGE.—Steele Parsons was invaluable last week at the entrance gate to fair ground....One hundred and twelve vehicles passed the Bush House in the space of thirty minutes on Thursday, going to the fair.....Garman's Hotel was over flowing all last week.....There was no betting at any of the races.....We saw a young lady riding a horse a la clothes-pin on Wednesday. She had been taking the cows to pasture..... Glass works are in full blast....Huling Thomas, Lock Haven's hackman, was heard on the streets last week.... "Church of Venice by Evangeline," a new thing, good for children, is just out, inquire of Adolph Loeb.....Col D. G. Bush has a very handsome carriage and such a skittish horse!.....A youthful Isrealite in the Tournament, was called the "Knight of the lost tribe"..... The days are growing shorter at both ends....John I. Potter & Co run a Sawmill at Snow Shoe. Nice lumber firm .....The politicians were the busiest men at the fair.....Secretary of the Alderny Cattle club in tears on Thursday. Alderny figure-head had a bloody battle with a Durham ditto.....District Attorney Potter's new and elegant reidence near Court House is almost completed. Good for John....It knocks three or four thousand dollars all to pieces, to pay monthly wages at the Car shops .....Every candidate's right hand is sore to day.....Scratching and cutting yesterday was equal to a thousand flocks of clucking hens.....Dept. Secretaty. John B. Linn, was at home on Sunday. ..Kind Providence has favored ex-Mayor Parsons, of Lock Haven. It is a male child.....If money matters don't soon ease up we will have to sleep on tick.

——At Port Carbon, on October 4th, 1873, Sarah J., wife of Professor E. T. Burgan, of the Agricultural College, of Pa., in the 24th year of her age.

Death at all times is terrible, but in this particular dispensation of Providence, there is much that is sad and mournful. Only a few months since, Professor Burgan brought to his home, at the College, his young and lovely wife. Life was sunshine and labor was play as the days passed happily and peacefully away. Every one at the College learned to love the deceased. Her many christian virtues and noble, self sacrificing traits of character, entwined themselves as tendrils of love around every heart. Then came the long and painful sickness, and then Heaven kindly opened to receive its own. She has left the earthly College and has gone to the High School of Heaven, where the blessed Savior has become her instructor, the angels her companions and that city, whose builder and maker is God, is her everlasting home. May this blessed assurance tinge with luster the dark cloud that overhangs the sorrowing friends. D. H. H.

At a meeting of the Faculty and students of the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania, the following Preambles and Resolutions were unanimously adopted.

WHEREAS, we have heard with profound sorrow of the great loss sustained by Professor E. T. Burgan which occured on the 4th, inst., therefore.

Resolved: That we bow with humble submission to this, as we would to all the acts of Divine Providence, which, though we often fail to comprehend, we fully believe are always pure, merciful and good.

Resolved: That our sympathy with our bereaved friend in this, his hour of deep affliction; and commend him to that sufficient grace so wonderously bestowed upon the patient sufferer who has just now fallen asleep in Jesus.

Resolved; That a copy of these Resolutions be presented to Professor E. T. Burgan, and also that they be published in Bellefonte and Port Carbon papers.

LOCAL NEWS.—As we desire to make our paper a medium for home as well as other news, we would be greatly obliged if our friends in different parts of the county would promptly send us any items or incidents of local interest that may transpire in their respective localities. As we have no means of gathering up intelligence of this kind (except when we have regular correspondence) except through the assistance of those who take an interest in affairs pertaining to their own section of the county, we trust that our friends all through the county will not be backward in coming forward with their communications. Send in the local news and we will fix them up in good shape for publication. Fires, floods, accidents, public meetings, marriages, deaths, elopements, &c., &c., are all matters of interest to our people, and should find their way to the public through the columns of the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN, the best news paper in Centre Co., and published in the city of Bellefonte. as the Watchman says "by two imported yankees" a little attention on the part of our friends in distant parts of our county would put us in possession of these matters and enable us to present to our readers each week, something like an outline of what is going on among our own population. We do not expect formal communications in every case, carefully arranged for publication; what we want is a simple and reliable statement of the fact, we care not in what shape they may come. Let our friends only furnish the information, and we will cheerfully undertake the task of preparing it for the paper.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Laurimore Bob. Fleming, T. C. Hipple and Irv. Curtin of Lock Haven took account of stock at the Fair on Thursday.

THE FAIR.—Let not the reader imagine that we are giving a premium list in this article; we will try to reproduce our impressions of sights and doings, so that the few who did not attend the ever held in this county, may have some idea of its entire success. We were not on the grounds on Tuesday or Wednesday, so that we missed a large share of the amusements.

THURSDAY

morning dawned with a clear sky, and never a cloud from which to prophesy bad weather. Early risers had made the streets lively before many of the town people were out of bed. Vehicles of all shapes, containing all sorts of people, came through the streets in continuous processions, and long before noon every available inch of stable and hitching ground, both in the Borough and on the Fair grounds, was occupied. At nine o'clock we fell into line and drove to the grounds. When within a quarter of a mile of the entrance, we were compelled to stop and wait on the long line of horses and vehicles ahead. Clerks were busy along the line selling entrance tickets, so that no delay would be made at the gate. When we reached the ground, before us was a sight worth beholding. To the right was the long line of cattle sheds. Every stall was occupied. Temporary sheds had been erected on all available grounds. Here was a fine Alderney cow, next a mammoth ox or a bull calf. There were pens of fine hogs and rare sheep. Further on were colts, heifers, draft horses and thorough-breds, till your head would swim. Hundreds of people, old and young, were strolling along in a noisy tour of inspection.

To the left, you saw upon the course, hundreds of horses and vehicles—Along comes an old-fashioned carióle with the whole family, from the grandfather to the grand-children. Here is the elegant family carriage, with stout, handsome horses, on a dignified trot. There an old-fashioned two-horse wagon with several families on board, rattles down the home stretch. These are all left behind by the spanking trotters and jagger wagons that sweep by just ahead of the clouds of dust. So they go, the numbers increasing until the course is one grand circle of live stock moving like an incipient whirlwind with a long radius. As you raise your vision to the vast Amphitheatre above the course, a view is presented that beggars the simple occupation of our lead pencil. The stranger must know that about one-half of the grounds is a semi-circular hillside, with an easy slope back from the race course to the large buildings near the summit. Every point on the hill commands a fine view of the course, entrance and every part of the grounds. This amphitheatre was literally chock-full of people. They were not grouped around in knots, but were spread all over the grounds as thick as flies on a bung hole. At different points were bands of music—good brass bands—blowing all sorts of harmony around through the air in chunks.

Will the reader go with the thfong to the

and observe their fair handiwork? It takes some scrouging to get into the main entrance, but we are now back in a corner where we can observe, in mind and body undisturbed. A continual egress and ingress prevails, but the latter predominates, and the long, large building is growing fuller and fuller every minute, like a drove of hungry cattle in a clover field. No one seems to care to go out when once in, and we didn't wonder, we felt that way ourself. This department was most complete.—Everything was nice, and there was plenty of everything. There appeared to be enough material to furnish, most completely, a score of houses from roof to celler, and keep them furnished for a decade, making due allowance for loss and gain in the family. Nothing need be excepted.

The fruits and grains in the next building, we were told, were better than ever before. We looked at the shelves of apples, pears and grapes, 'til the people's mouths around us began to water, and then we turned with emotion to the pumpkins, the turnips, the cereal grains the gourds, the girls, and then we left them alone in their glory, because it was ten o'clock and all eyes were turned to the course.

THE ZELLER ZOUAVES,

headed by a brass band, now tramp around the track, and, at the judges stand, evolutionize like veterans. Messrs. Geo. N. Hale and Adolph Loeb, now take charge of the amusements, and no further assurance is needed that the spectators will be entertained. The foot race is called. Five contestants appear. They are off, and English Jim crosses the score in 1:30. This was nearly half the time of the winner in the bay-window race of the previous day, when five 200-pounders skipped 'round the circle, and Ira Leathers came off more than conqueror.

This afternoon (and every one of the four days), was devoted, among other things, to trotting and running matches. They were the best races ever held in the county. We were glad to notice that there was no betting, no quarrels, no loud or improper conduct whatever, and the management deserve great praise for the prevailing good order and harmony.

FRIDAY

was a delightful day overhead, and although there were not so many spectators present as on Thursday, yet a large concourse assembled early in the day to witness the crowning efforts of the amusement committee. Two wheelbarrow races were inaugurated. In the first, five contestants raced 'round the track, each in the shafts of an Irish buggy. English Jim verified his British pedigree by winning the race. Then they were blindfolded, and, with wheelbarrows in their hands, wheeled to an unseen goal. This was the race that produced the desired effect on the fun-loving bystanders. Now came on the

A ring, suspended in mid air above the course, was to be taken from its place and carried away on the spear of a mounted Knight, riding at full speed.

The following entries were announced:

Sir Amos Mullin, Knight of the Red Cross.
Sir Orlando Curtin, Knight of the Lost Cause.
Sir H. K. Hicks, Knight of the Anvil.
Sir M. Cooney, Knight of St. Elmo.
Sir E. Stern, Knight of the Lost Tribe.
Sir I. Lose, Knight of the Bloody Ink Stand.

Marshalls gave the Knights their places in the tourney, the ring was placed in position, the Knights mounted, and, with spears in their hands, cantered off for the contest. At a given signal the initial Knight rode down the course at full speed, his spear poised and ready for the thrust. The rider passed but the ring remained. Then followed the others, each riding like a very John Gilpen. Time after time did the turf echo the clatter of the foaming steeds; but the feat was a difficult one, and not until an hour was spent in vain attempts, was the ring taken from its lodgment, and the conquering hero crowned with victory. Among all the brave and courteous Knights, Sir Amos Mullin, the valiant and magnanimous Knight of the Red Cross, was proclaimed winner and was presented with the reward of his valor. Thus closed the amusements at the County Fair.

THE CONCLUSION

drawn from the effect and efforts of these four Fair days, is most pleasant and satisfactory. President Orvis and Secretary Keller, as well as the Executive Committee, were always to be found. They were on the ground all the time—no one was neglected. There was a head to the Society that performed the numerous devolving duties promptly and well. As far as we could learn, the different committees did their duties faithfully and impartially; but we must speak in the most unmeasured terms of praise in regard to the management of the amusements. Every day was replete with wholesome, harmless fun. All were pleased, none offended. To the whole-souled, well directed efforts of George N. Hale and Adolph Loeb, the committee on amusements, the Agricultural Society and the thousands of people present, are certainly very much indebted. They were the right men in their moral sphere as it were. This article is now 'most as long as an old-fashioned sermon, and our pencil weakens.

WOODWARD PA. Oct. 11th 1873.

E. T. & R. P. TUTEN:—Gentlemen: Please allow me space in your valuable paper for the following. Having written you a line for publication which appeared in Vol. 5, No. 36, Sept. 24th, 1873, in reply to the vile slang of "Shon" which appeared from week to week in your paper was a mistake on our part which we are all pleased to learn, as the young gentleman alluded to, is a young man of rare business qualifications and a gentleman in every respect. We are indeed sorry, and very sorry to be compelled as we thought to suppose for a moment that he could so entirely throw himself away to all decency and respect for self and neighbor, and take upon himself the dirty, mean, low and filthy burden, to vilify, abuse and slander those who have done him no harm or injustice knowingly, and hope those who have seen the former article sent you by me, may see what I am now penning to you and shield him from all guilt, and place the blame on one who fears neither the Laws of God or the Laws of the Land, much less to respect the feelings of his best friends and neighbors, or the honest convictions of his own depraved heart. He who would print upon his neighbor's brow, knowing it to be a lie (the sin he every day commits) is not worthy the reply of a gentleman. I do this only to retract what was intended for him, who, is innocent of the outrage against almost the entire community. We say Fiat justitia ruat coelum lux so all may not be lost to decency and self respect here and eternal rest in the realms above as all may not wish the fate of "Shon" in the world to come. This, gentlemen, shall be the last time I shall trouble you as I do not wish to impose upon your good nature. I think if you do the bidding of one brainless c—s its enough for you, but we are not done, as we said before, we shall be with him until the end of our lives, for we think Dum vivimus, vivamus.

PINE GROVE MILLS, Oct. 3, 1873.

The Ferguson Twp. Temperance Association convened at the above time and place, Rev. Norcross presiding, meeting opened by singing and prayer when Rev. Norcross made a few introductory remarks stating the object of the meeting, &c, declaring Intemperance the greatest evil of our land, urging the great necessity of reform in this direction. Gen. W. H. Blair then followed with an interesting and earnest address astonishing the audience with statistical statements of the great morality caused by intemperance or the immoderate use of alcoholic beverages, and notwithstanding all the preaching and praying against it in the past, it has been fearfully on the increase and while he heartily endorsed preaching and praying against this evil, he believes the time has come when men should vote against it as well; it being as much a political question as any that comes before the people, trully a political question, but not a party question, for it concerns both parties alike; he closed by showing the necessity of vigilantly guarding the Local Option law, by electing only men who will surely not vote for its repeal or modification. Rev. M. L. Smyser of Bellefonte then addressed the audience in a very earnest and exhortive manner, showing that the question of Temperance or Intemperance is paramount to every other question that can come before the people at this time, that it should lay near the heart and consciences of the people, much nearer than partyism or party ties, that it is strictly a political question but not a party question and the time having come for action it behooves the friends of Temperance to see to it by the power of their votes and their influences, that men irrespective of party are elected who will carefully vote against repealing or tampering with the Local Option law and also the law generally known as the Buckalew law, without which the former would be ineffectual and of no value, by request he then read the Constitution and By-laws of the Open Temperance Union of Centre Co. Rev. Norcross then made a few brief and pointed remarks. On motion Rockspring was agreed upon as the next place of meeting, first Friday of November. On motion the Secretary was requested to furnish copies of the minutes for publication in the county papers. Adjourned to meet at the above time and place.

A. J. ORENDORF, Secretary, protem.

——We have heard a number of complaints among the subscribers to the daily Public Record, because they don't get the paper regularly, and having seen the carrier throw dozens of them into the creek opposite our office, at different times, we suppose that is the reason therefore.

—— The corner stone of the Evangelical Church at Wolf's Store, east end of Brush Valley, was laid with appropriate ceremonies on last Sabbath. Rev. S. Smith, P. E. of Williamsport, officiated.

——A young Bellefonte David took his little sling, the other day and deposited a stone in the eye of a ten year-old school-boy. The eye sight of the latter will be impaired for some time.

——Jesse Klinger, Esquire, the justly popular Justice of the Peace, is building a new office on his property in the West Ward.

——Two car loads of the machinery of the Bellefonte Iron Co's Mill was shipped to Williamsport on Monday.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESS—MONSTER TAP-WORM REMOVED FROM ONE OF OUR WELL KNOWN CITIZENS.

BELLEFONTE, PA. Oct. 13, 1873.

This is to certify that I have been afflicted with a derangement of the Stomach and Bowels, with more or less pain at the side for the last ten years; at times would be greatly annoyed with a rising, crawling, and choaking in my throat; have taken treatment from Physicians, but to no purpose, all failing to comprehend my case. Hearing of the great success of Dr. Stearns who is stopping at the Brockerhoff House in this place, I called on him for an examination, he at once decided that I had a Tape-worm. I commenced taking his remedy at 1 o'clock P. M. Oct. 12th, and the result was at 7 o'clock in the evening of the same day, I was relieved of a monster Tape-worm about thirty five feet in length. I make this statement for the benefit of others who are afflicted with disease.

GEO. ROBB.

Dr. Stearns is stopping at the Brockerhoff House in Bellefonte, and will remain for a few days. He treats all diseases, successfully with Vege able remedies, if not too far advanced. All wishing consulation should call at once as his stay is limited.

Terms—$2 per annum, in advance; single copies, 22 cents.

Wood's Household Magazine, for October, has thrust its cheery little self into our presence It brings to us the treasures it has been gathering the past month, and all are deserving of notice. Each has its own peculiar value, and "Maggie" holds up this, that and the other literary gem and archly seems to say, "what do you think of this?" And "isn't this nice?" and "Look at that!" and we glance at them all and say, "Yes! Yes! All are good!" There is also a pretty engraving of the chromo YOSEMITE, which the publisher is offering as a premium which it would be well for all our readers to examine; it gives a very accurate idea save in size and coloring, of what the chromo YOSEMITE is.

Price of the Magazine, One Dollar a year, with chromo, One Dollar and a Half. Address, Wood's Household Magazine, Newburgh, N. Y.

AMERICAN WORKING PEOPLE.

The September number of this sterling friend of every working man comes to us greatly improved in mechanical appearance and contents. Under the new management, it is fast working its way into every shop, mine, factory and works in the United States, bringing encouraging words and good advice, to its thousands of subscribers. It is recognized as the representative workingman's paper in America, always standing up for their rights, and championing their cause, in a dignified manner, which command the respect of capital as well as labor.

The publishers are making an excellent paper of The Working People and one of which the working class should be proud.

Every Working man should take the paper and the Working Bosses and Foremen of every shop, factory, mill and mine, should interest themselves and see that their men do take it.—Subscription $1.50 per year. The publishers offer an extraordinary premium list, to getters up of clubs, and a very liberal cash commission to permanent agents. For particulars and sample copy, address The Advisor Publishing Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Edward E. Eyre & Son have succeeded Eyre & Landell in the Dry Good Business, Fourth and Arch Street, Philadelphia, as will be seen by their advertisement in this issue. They make a specialty of dealing in the finer class of Dry Goods. Give them a call!

THE Purest and Sweetest Cod Liver Oil is Hazard & Caswell's, made on the sea shore, from fresh, selected livers, by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market. 37-4t

Over-Exertion, either of body or mind, produces debility and disease. The usual remedy is to take some stimulant, the effect of which is the same as giving a tired horse the whip instead of oats. The true way is to fortify the System with a permanent tonic like the Peruvian syrup (a protoxide of iron,) which gives strength and vigor to the whole system.

THE SIMPLE REASON

why Hand Sapollo is the best article in the world for the constant use of all classes of people, is because it will do what no other substance will, as follows:

MECHANICS.—Will entirely remove tar, paint, oil and varnish from clothing and hands.

FARMERS.—Its use will prevent tan, sunburns, chapped hands.

WORKING WOMEN.—It will take the place of powders and cosmetics for beautifying the complexion, and will render the hands white and soft, no matter how much they are used.

EVERYBODY.—It is the best article in the world for removing all cutaneous blemishes from the skin, and rendering it white, beautiful, and natural in color. In price cheaper than soap—only 10 and 15 cents a cake, according to size.

CURRANT CAKE—To the yolks of five eggs, beaten, add two cups of white sugar, three-quarters cup of butter, one cup sweet milk, four cups flower, having in it one measure Banner Baking Powder, whites of five eggs, well beaten, two cups of currants, washed, dried, picked, and well dredged with flour, this prevents them from sinking; they should be stirred in last. Bake in shallow pans.

Each can of the Banner Baking Powder contains a small measure, to be used even full, according to printed directions. If you cannot obtain this really valuable article from your grocer, send twenty-five cents by mail, addressed to Banner Baking Powder, P. O. Lock Box 317, Pittsburgh, Pa, and you will receive postage paid, a quarter pound package, together with a list of fifty valuable Recipes.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscription to the Capital Stock of the Centennial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employed in the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundred birth-day of the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will receive a handsomely steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent per annum will be paid on all payments of Centennial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned

Centaur Liniment

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no articles ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—these liniments are worth your attention. No family should be without them. "White wrapper for family use;" Yellow wrapper for animals. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles $1.00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest. 5-30-1y
